COPISA, a company specialising in the construction and maintenance of infrastructure, has been honoured at the 25th MC MUTUAL Antonio Baró Awards for Occupational Risk Prevention for its commitment to employee health and safety and its implementation of an effective prevention policy.

The award recognises COPISA's prevention culture, based on anticipating risks, providing specialised training and continuously improving working conditions, with people's well-being and protection as fundamental priorities.

This is the second time COPISA has received the award, having previously won it in 2006.

“Receiving this recognition again after winning it in 2006 is a source of pride and motivation. It recognises the commitment of everyone in the organisation and, at the same time, encourages us to keep moving forward,” explains Montse Tribó, head of COPISA’s Prevention Service.

“Our next challenges in this area are to consolidate the goal of zero accidents; continue incorporating innovation and digitalisation while keeping the human factor at the centre; help promote well-being and mental health; and continue making progress in adapting to climate change and workforce diversity,” Tribó adds.

For COPISA, occupational risk prevention is a strategic value and a fundamental commitment. The company focuses on continuous training, the adoption of new technologies and the constant improvement of its processes. It also promotes a working model based on collaboration and the application of common safety standards, involving partner companies in the same high standards and commitment to protecting people.

This year’s edition coincides with a double celebration: the 25th anniversary of the Antonio Baró Awards and the 125th anniversary of MC MUTUAL, whose history is closely linked to the evolution of social protection and occupational risk prevention in Spain.

About the MC MUTUAL Antonio Baró Awards

The MC MUTUAL Antonio Baró Awards for Occupational Risk Prevention were established in 2001 in memory of the former president of Mutual Cyclops, who held the post for 14 years and was known for his commitment to safety and improving working conditions.

Over its 25 editions, the awards programme has received more than 1,000 entries and recognised 150 projects for their contribution to occupational risk prevention.
